Justin Bieber is no stranger to life in the fast lane — after all, he was arrested in 2014 for drag racing in Miami. But he's been doing better lately, so we can't believe he'd try it again!

Alright, we'll give the Biebs a break since this time he was racing with Jimmy Fallon on "The Tonight Show with Jimmy Fallon."

Justin and Jimmy were joined by "Modern Family" actor Jesse Tyler Ferguson and "The Root's" Tariq to make up the celebrity contestants. Each one was paired with a Sprint Cup NASCAR pro racer (Jeff Gordon, Kevin Harvick, Martin Truex Jr., and Kyle Busch) for a LOL-worthy race in Rockefeller Plaza.

Did he win? Check out the video to find out.

Justin also performed his new single "Sorry" on the show, gearing him up for this morning's performance on "Today".

In front of a packed crowd, Justin performed more new songs and discussed how he lost a close friend and member of his production team in the Paris terrorist attacks. He also discussed how he's growing up after a few very turbulent years.

"A lot of people go through those struggles, but they're not in the public eye," the 21-year-old told Matt Lauer. "I grew up in the spotlight, so it was tough for me. But we're on the other side."
